The most notable thing about the Elam Beirne duel is that these duelists are bad shots. Eight paces is not a long distance; indeed it seems to bring the combatants so near to death that Mr. Elam was supposed to have named it with a view to killing or being killed. Both the men are said to have nerve, to say nothing of experience.

The reports represent that they bore themselves cooly and calmly. Yet under these circumstances the first fire was harmless. It required a second shot to puncture so much as the fleshy part of the thigh of one. This cannot be called good shooting, particularly in a section where every gentle man is supposed to be familiar with the use of the revolver, and where editors are ready to fight on sight. Everybody has a certain respect for a man who knows his business, whether he be dog-fighter, ratcatcher, or duelist. Now, we might be content with simply giving the lie to all of this, as we do generally, for the Readjuster party, and apacially in so far as its charges are meant to apply to the Whig, or anybody connected with the Whig in arcsponsible way; but we wish further to any that the whole article from which we make these extracts is a tissue of general denuciation which would humiliate us if it were not accompanied by lofty pretensions of superiority in manners, morais, and letters that are laughably ridiculous, coming from a source so pititable in all moral and intellectual resources; and we wish further to say that this denunciation is made with an airor such utter ferocity that it might alarm us but for our recollection of the fact that the hero (the Bombaster Furlosc) of the Rate has the singular reportation of having illustrated bis untanned valor only by genguloscent and the other hand, the numbic personage who r hand, the humble personage who this occasion, has the honor to represent the Whig, its aditorial corps, and the Readjuster party, is at least reported to have been so rash, once upon a time, as not to have forgotten the caps—falling before a shot

Phila. Oor. Boston Banafacturer's Gazelle.

One of the influences not to be lost sight of in forecasting the future of the iron trade is the substitution of steel for iron, by the means of the basic process, which is being introduced in several manufacturing establishments throughout the West, and one east of the mountains—the Harrisburg steel works. This process, as your readers are aware, admits of the substitution of phosphoric pig iron, now almost worthless, and it therefore involves the erection of works at points of least ore and coal freight resistance, to speak after the manner of engineers. ngineers. more what has Mr. Beirne gained by shooting Mr. Elam in the fleshy part of the thigh?

It is plain that Mr. Elam gains nothing but a wound in the fleshy part of the thigh, which may be to him a great inconvenience when he resumes the editorial chair. The theory upon which was founded the trial by combat was that the right would prevail. Certainly Mr. Elamand his friends will not admit that the right did prevail.

Another view of this business is that if either believed the other to be what he is the resumes the cause of decline in so needful and popular an institution as a State University is attributable to some unistakes in the appointment of its officials. In institutions of hearning, educators are wanted, not politicians; men with American ideas and principles of twenty years ago—such men work success, all others nothing but failure and retrogression.

HERE BEGE FREEZ and Minows. Has Been Phere and Knows.

We have a word more to say of the State We have a word more to say of the State University. We were there under two administrations and know something of it. And we now assert, and can prove, that since 1872 that institution has been run in the interest of the Democratic party. Even its text books are of the type ustriendly to the Union—the doctrine of States Rights is thoroughly taught, and everything is done from a Bourbon standpoint. Unless it is liberalized it ought to die, and may God speed the day.

The Collectorship.

With high respect for Governor Pierpont personally and with proper appreciation of his great services to the country and his party, we fail to see that he was, as he is reported as saying, "badly treated" because he was not appointed Collector of the consolidated district. General Duval is not only the oldest Collector, but he has the advantage of living in the metropolis and capitol of the State. We would be glad to hear of Governor Pierpont's appointment to a good office by the President.

We are gall to hear that Gen. Duyal's popularity goes hand in hand with his merits. He was a more, gallant Union soldier, and bears on his body the effects of severe wounds received in battle. It is a pleasure to his old army comrades to hear that his past discharge of the duties of his office has justified his retention in the revenue service.
